HERSTORY OF 34 WOMAN DIES YEARS IN PRISON

Libbie Garrabrandt Tells for the Mrs. Henrietta Brower Found First Time the Facts About the Murder for Which She Was Sentenced.

TRENTON, April 17.—Libble Garra-brandt, who has spent nearly thirty-four years in the State prison here for poisoning a man at the behest of her over, and whose case has again been presented, so strongly, to the Board of Pardons that there is a good chance of her being freed sooh, to-day told the remarkable story of her life for the first time.

She is fifty-one years old now, but looks younger. She has enjoyed special privileges in jail for many years, and parring a slight heart affection, is in good health. She appeared before the Board of Purdons on Thursday last for the forty-first time since she has been in just, and the thought that she may soon be free has almost overcome her.

"I hardly knew the man I killed," she said to-day, "I was a child. I had no motive, I was not a vicious character. Good women have tried for years to have me pardoned, but, somehow they will not let me go. I dare not get my hopes up too much now, for I have find an many disencement. so many disappointments.

"My mother did not want me to go out at night, and I would go. She scolded and I decided to fun away from home. It was just about that time that I met van Winkle Bogart. He was much older than I was. He was a carpenter. I fell in love with tinued there after I left home. Van Winkle Bogart and I went to live with Charle Burroughs. His wife was in this very prison, but I didn't know to at the time. He was a man over fifty, a bridge tender, and very poor. No one could could have had any possible reason for wanting to kill nim that I could

I took it out to Bogart, who was wuiting for me on the corner. That isn't what I want to buck and set a white powder, its said. I went buck and iold the druggist. 'I haven't anything cive but arsenic, he said, so I bought is cerus' worth of arsenic. It looked like white sugar.

"Iwant you to do something for me.' Hogart said, when I came out of the shop. 'Put this into Burroughe's food tonight.' Why?' I asked. 'Nover mind why: just do it—for me, Libble,' he said. I was silly and young and thoughtiess. I believed in him and I loved him, so I took the powd home, and when supper was ready unit the rice pudding was to be served, I sprinkled the arsenicatil of it—over Burroughe's portion.
